Little Sister, BIG PROBLEM

"AND I say," Mrs. Kilroy's voice was vehement, "that you are not going alone!"

Natch tried to plead with his mother. "But Judy's out of town, mom," he reasoned. "She'd be hurt if I took someone else to th' dance—that's why I'm goin' stag!"

"And I say," Mrs. Kilroy retorted, "that you are not going alone! You're going to escort your little sister!"

"Katie?" Natch's voice was a sharp squeak. "That little pest? Gee whiz, mom, be reasonable! Nobody takes his sister to a dance and besides, Katie's nothin' but a little drip!"

"Shame on you, Natch Kilroy!" his mother said. "What kind of brother are you? Here's your very own sister, lonely, with nothing to do and you—"

"All right, all right," Natch gave in wearily, "I know I'm gonna lose this round anyhow! Tell the little goon to get ready!"

"I am ready, Natch," Katie said shyly. "See? I've got my new dress on, and my new wedgie flats and my new—"

"Then c'mon!" Natch ordered, without so much as a glance at his little sister. "It's gettin' late!"

In complete silence, Natch and Katie walked to the school gym, where the dance had started an hour ago. Natch was annoyed beyond words. To think that he, practically a grown man, an adult, should be subjected to the shame of his kid sister's company!

She—she was such a kid! No more'n a baby, and he would have to introduce her to th' crowd and dance with her and see to it that she had a good time. Phooey!

"C'mon, sad-sack," he said to her, when they reached the gym. "Wait right here for me. I've gotta comb my hair."

But when Natch, his hair slicked and shining, came back—Katie was gone! Worried, he started a survey of the huge gym floor, thinking to himself all the while, "The little pest! She had no business comin' here anyhow! She—"

Suddenly, Natch stopped short. There, right in the center of the floor, was Katie, dancing with—dancing with—the captain of the football team! As he watched, Natch saw another boy cut in. Why, that was—Red Watkins, captain of the basketball team! Before Katie could dance many more steps, another boy cut in—and another—and another!

Natch could hardly believe his eyes. You'd think there was a severe girl shortage or somethin', that's how popular Katie was! And, come to think of it, she wasn't a bad-lookin' chick—sorta cute, in fact. Of course, she was kinda annoying at home, with the telephone an' cluttering up the bathroom and her wacky radio shows, but—

Natch tried to understand it, but couldn't. Instead, he joined the dancers and the rest of the evening seemed to float away in a haze of music and laughter, and suddenly, it was time to go home!

Again, Natch looked around for Katie—but she seemed to be gone! No, wait a minute. There she was, in a cluster of eager, laughing boys, all of them clamoring to take her home!

"Let me, Katie!"

"No, me!"

"I saw her first!"

Determinedly, Natch strode across the floor and took Katie's arm firmly in his. "Blow, wolves," he ordered the boys. "I'm takin' Katie home—myself!"

"Aw, Natch," Red Watkins protested, "we can't let this little dreambeam go to waste! You can't take her home!"

"Why not?" Natch asked proudly, holding on to Katie. "I'm her brother, ain't I?"

PEACE... It's WONDERFUL!

JUDY and Natch sat close together on the park bench. Natch breathed a deep sigh of contentment. "Gosh, Judy," he said, "it's swell to have ya back again. I sure missed you!"

"Did you?" Judy asked a bit coldly. "Y'know somethin', Natch? If I didn't think quarreling was the most childish thing, positively infantile, I'd mention that coke date you had with Jane while I was gone!"

"Gee, Judy, I'm glad ya feel that way about it—quarreling, I mean! It's awful dumb for two grown-ups ta get into a fight, isn't it? That's how come I never said anything about your bowling date with Fuzzhead Collins!"

"You never said anything!" Judy's voice was a bit indignant. "I should hope not! Only mere babes would squabble and argue. That's why I won't say anything about how surprised I was that you took Jane. She's such a funny-looking girl!"

"If it wasn't plain juvenile," Natch said loftily, "I could mention that Fuzzhead's no beauty either—the egghead!"

"Is that so?" Judy sprang to Fuzzhead's defense. "He's a very nice boy—with very good manners!" she added pointedly.

"Listen, Judy," Natch edged away from her on the bench, "I'm beginning to get peeved. I mean I don't like your attitude!"

"You don't like my attitude, Natch Kilroy?" Judy's voice was definitely angry now. "Well, let me tell you something—"

"Oh, yeah?" Natch asked sarcastically. "You listen to me! Do you know what I think of a girl who goes out with another man when her real boyfriend—I mean, when she's sort of got a boyfriend already—and she goes out on a date with someone else without even having the courtesy to—"

"Courtesy!" Judy interrupted scornfully. "After what you did, I should think you didn't know the meaning of that word! Just because I had to go out of town on a visit, you thought you could take advantage—I mean you've probably always liked Jane and—"

"A lot you know!" Natch was quite furious by this time. "You don't know anything!"

"I know all I want to know!" Judy was angry enough to cry. "Why, I could just—could just—" She raised her hand, as though to smack Natch's cheek.

Self-protectively, Natch reached out to clutch Judy's wrists—and just then, Jackson, eyes wide with surprise, strolled past the park bench.

"Tsk, ts!" he clucked, stopping and taking in the scene. "Can I believe my eyes? Are these two little love birds—quarreling?"

"Don't you dare hit me!" Judy cried, ignoring Jackson completely.

"Don't you—" Natch began, clinging to her wrists.

"Shame on both of you!" Jackson said, trying to come between them. "I'm astonished to—ouch! Hey—cut it out! Leggo! Judy—stop pulling my hair! Natch, quit it!"

All Natch's and Judy's pent-up anger was vented on poor, innocent Jackson! Judy tugged violently at his hair, while Natch, kicking out, felt the toe of his saddle shoe connect with the seat of Jackson's slacks!

"C'mon, Judy," Natch said to his girl. "It looks like he's trying to make trouble for us!"

"You bet!" Judy answered quickly, slipping her hand through Natch's arm. "Quarreling! We wouldn't dream of such a childish thing! He's only trying to separate us!"

For a moment, they both stared scornfully at Jackson and then, heads together, they ambled off into the park. Rubbing his head in bewilderment, Jackson could hear Judy's disdainful voice.

"Quarreling?" she was saying. "I should say not!"

But OFFICER...

MR. JACKSON, with a hard day at the office behind him, rounded the corner of his block. He was going home to a good dinner, a pair of comfortable slippers and an evening of relaxation—and he could hardly wait!

Suddenly, a large, heavy hand came down on his shoulder, and Mr. Jackson turned to stare up into the stern eyes of Peters, the policeman.

"Er—hello," he said a bit nervously, wondering whether he had parked near a hydrant or jay-walked across Main Street.

"Mr. Jackson," the cop began severely, "there have been too many shenanigans in this neighborhood. Too many entirely!"

Mr. Jackson wondered what Peters was leading up to. "Would you mind—" he began, thinking wistfully of his dinner.

"One of the boys in this neighborhood is a terror!" Peters continued gravely. "A regular young hooligan!"

"My son!" Mr. Jackson thought, with a start of guilt. "What has he been doing now?"

"The rascalion of whom I speak," the policeman went on, "committed a serious misdemeanor today—very serious! Broke a brand new window in Parker's Department Store! That kid's headin' for trouble!"

Mr. Jackson gulped. He envisioned his son, his own flesh and blood, walking the last mile through the stony corridors of some vile prison towards the electrocution chamber. The thought was too much for him. He felt that he had to get home immediately and warn his boy to leave town—to leave the country if necessary!

He tried to pull away from the policeman's grasp, but it was no use. Peters held his shoulder in a grip of iron and said, "Just a minute, Mr. Jackson!"

"Excuse me," Mr. Jackson stammered, "but I just remembered—"

"Before you go," the cop said, "there's something I want to ask you." He brandished a small book in front of Mr. Jackson's nose. "You wouldn't be interested in buying a coupla tickets to the Policeman's Ball now, would you?"

"How—how much are they?" asked Mr. Jackson, reaching into his pocket. If he bought the tickets, perhaps the policeman would stop molesting his poor criminal son.

"Twenty-five dollars—thank you!" Peters saluted smartly and left Mr. Jackson to totter weakly up the front steps of his house.

"Son!" he bellowed angrily, confronting his wayward boy. "How could you? How could you? Disgracing my name, the name of your family, turning your poor mother's hair white before her time, breaking your old father's heart—"

"But, pop—what did I do?"

"Do you mean to stand there, you young convict, and tell me you don't remember breaking a big window in Parker's Department Store?" Mr. Jackson demanded.

"Who, me?" his son's face was a study in surprise. "That wasn't me, pop—that was Chuck Harris—he busted the window with a baseball and—"

"And to think I paid that policeman twenty-five dollars to clear your name!"

"My name? Did he mention my name?"

"Er—no," Mr. Jackson was forced to admit. "Come to think of it—he didn't! And come to think of it, I guess I deserved it—for being ready to think it might have been you—son!"

You might ordinarily expect to pay much more than that for a good developing kit. Yet here you not only get a big, 14-piece Developing Kit so that you can actually make and develop your own pictures, but also a famous make candid-type Camera which takes regular size pictures. Positively not a toy. Both the Camera and the Developing Kit are "the real thing"—guaranteed to work on the same principle as those used by experienced photographers.

Easy To Make Your Own Pictures!

Think of it!—You can go out and snap pictures of your favorite scenes, of important events and land-marks, or of members of your family. Then, within a few minutes after you snap the pictures, you can develop them yourself. Virtually without waiting you can make and develop those same pictures right in your own home. Watch them come to life... clear and sharp... before your very eyes, almost like magic. Sensational! Exciting! Thrilling fun such as you've never known before.

Make Money While Having Fun!

This is the chance of a lifetime to pursue an interesting hobby and learn the fascinating photography business at the same time. You can even make money in your spare hours. Use your Home Developing Kit to accommodate friends and neighbors. They'll be glad to give you their business for it will save them time and money, just as it does you.

THE CAMERA has all the latest features, including snapshot and time exposure and level view finder. Uses easy-to-get 127 film and takes 16 pictures on an 8-exposure roll. THE DEVELOPING KIT consists of 14 individual pieces as shown. There are 2 plastic trays, 1 metal print frame, 1 stirring rod, 1 package of two dozen sheets of contact paper, 3 Universal M-Q developer packs, 1 box acid-fixing solution, 1 plastic funnel, 1 GE darkroom light, 2 plastic clips and 1 easy-to-follow Handbook of developing and printing.
